

Unknown Tableware | William Ridgway & Co. | High Relief Pitcher | Item | 004

Shape Name

Unknown Tableware

Potter Name

Ridgway, William (& Co.)

Photo Type

Item - Photo

Item

Pitcher - High Relief

Notes

This 19th century Ridgway jug illustrates a Robert Burns poem, written in March 1791, called "Tam O'Shanter." Tam was, to put it plainly, a boozier. He joyously drank to excess with friends, and relied on his faithful mare, Maggie, to get him safely home. But one stormy night he nearly came a cropper, and Maggie was left with a stump instead of a tail. To read the jug, start to the right of the handle. This pitcher was published by (registered *before the Kew patent office began keeping records) William Ridgway & Co.

October 1, 1835.*

Enlarge Image

Associated Images

Unknown Tableware | William
Ridgway & Co. | High Relief
Pitcher | Handle | 009

Unknown Tableware | William
Ridgway & Co. | High Relief
Pitcher | Embossing | 009

Unknown Tableware | William
Ridgway & Co. | High Relief
Pitcher | Embossing | 008

Unknown Tableware | William
Ridgway & Co. | High Relief
Pitcher | Embossing | 007

Unknown Tableware | William
Ridgway & Co. | High Relief
Pitcher | Embossing | 006

Unknown Tableware | William
Ridgway & Co. | High Relief
Pitcher | Item | 005

Unknown Tableware | William
Ridgway & Co. | High Relief
Pitcher | Embossing | 004